5 Student Services and Formation Units

CHAPTER 5

STUDENT SERVICES AND FORMATION UNITS

Student services and formation units are composed of offices that develop and implement programs and services that are geared towards the welfare and holistic formation of students. They provide invaluable experiences and opportunities for students to mature as individuals, leaders and community members. More so, these offices contribute to making XU a vibrant and dynamic academic community.

I. Office of Mission and Ministry

The Office of Mission and Ministry (OMM) is the umbrella unit of the University's formation cluster headed by the Vice President for Mission and Ministry, which is responsible for the non-academic formation of everyone in the University community. Comprising the Mission and Ministry Cluster are the Office of Student Affairs (OSA), Campus Ministries Office (CMO), Guidance and Counseling Office (GCO), Athletics Office (UAO), National Service Training Program (NSTP), Xavier Center for Culture and the Arts (XCCA), and Office of Chaplaincy. The efforts of offices under OMM are focused on the five areas of formation: 1) Spiritual/Faith Moral; 2) Psycho-Emotional; 3) Physical Wellness; 4) Socio-Cultural and 5) Mission and Service.

With its mandate to oversee the whole spectrum of formation initiatives on campus, OMM also works closely with the Basic Education Cluster namely the Senior High School, Junior High School and Grade School Formation units.

As a coordinating and monitoring body of all formation initiatives in the University, it assesses the program implementation of the units/departments under the cluster, with the aim to form students, faculty, formators, non-teaching staff and administrators into Better Persons, Better Workers and Better Citizens.

A. Office of Student Affairs

The Office of Student Affairs (OSA) exists to facilitate the non-academic support services needed to maintain an atmosphere conducive for study and personal development of the students and to facilitate a dynamic and exciting University life. 2. Student Formation

Under OSA is the Student Activities and Leadership Development (OSA-SACDEV). It is dedicated to providing students with quality programs, services and leadership opportunities that enrich the students' classroom experience and non-academic endeavors. More so, it oversees the recognition and management of over 70 student organizations composed of the Central Student Government (CSG), College Councils, Co and Extra-Curricular Organizations, Media/Publications Organizations (Crusader Publication and Crusader Yearbook) and Professional Organizations among others. It also works for the individual development of students through training programs that are in accord with developing the students' leadership and management skills.

a.) The Central Student Government (CSG) is the highest governing body of all XU students in the higher ed level. It addresses, promotes, protects and preserves the needs, dignity, ideals and aspirations of the students pursuant to the mission of the University in forming men and women for others. In fulfilling this function, CSG works with the Assembly of Extra-Curricular Organizations (AECO) and the eight undergraduate college councils.

CSG provides student leaders a first-hand experience on governance. The Senate, which is the legislative branch of CSG and composed of the elected vice presidents of the college councils and convener of AECO, formulates student-related policies and implements programs and projects that address campus issues, facilitate faculty-student interaction and promote student awareness.

b) The College Councils are composed of students who are enrolled in a particular school or college. College councils promote the rights, welfare and responsibilities of their members and implement programs and projects that primarily benefit their members and the larger community. These include collaborative projects with other organizations, college month or week-long celebrations, intramurals and outreach projects.

The college councils are affiliated with their respective college dean's offices where they also serve as arm and coordinating body for the implementation of programs and policies promulgated by their respective schools/colleges. They are also complemented with a number of co-curricular organizations harmonizing the students' academic formation.

c.) Co-Curricular Organizations (Co-Currs) are organizations composed of students enrolled in a specific course or discipline. They focus on a particular academic area and initiate programs and projects that are designed for (but may not be limited to) the promotion of their field of study and the academic enhancement of their members (e.g. special lectures, seminars or fora). In addition, co-currs liaise between students and the academic departments in matters concerning their studies (e.g. curriculum, policies specific to their course, etc).

d.) Extra-Curricular Organizations (Extra-Currs) are organizations primarily designed to cater to students' special interests. They are open to all students regardless of what college or academic program they belong. They specialize in a specific field of interest such as leadership, social awareness, fellowship, community service, sports, arts and culture and many others. While majority of these organizations are under OSA, companies such as the Glee Club, Cultural Dance Troupe, Dulaang Atenista, The Xavier Stage and Xavier Philharmonia are housed under the Xavier Center for Culture and the Arts (XCCA).

e.) The Assembly of Extra-Curricular Organizations (AECO), which is considered a council, governs a wide variety of extra-curricular organizations for students to choose from, may it be for the arts such as theater, music or visual arts; environment; socio-cultural, service-learning; or something more physical such as athletics clubs and teams, physical contact sports or mountaineering. A convener of AECO is chosen by the presidents of the different extra-curricular organizations and sits in the CSG's Senate.

f.) Media/Publications are organizations whose projects are realized through audio, video, print or online publication. These groups primarily advance student needs and express student views. They accept students enrolled in any course.

g.) Religious Organizations organize programs and projects which serve as support for students in a particular religious denomination. They implement programs and projects that are in accord with the promotion of faith and justice. They accept members regardless of course. Religious organizations are directly under the Campus Ministries Office.

h.) Program-Based Groups are directly affiliated with a particular unit in the University. These are specialized groups mandated to promote a special advocacy. Their membership requirements include a commitment to work for and an interest in a particular cause. Such cause may be social in nature.

i.) Professional Organizations are composed of students enrolled in the graduate or professional courses. They seek to further a particular profession or field of expertise, the interest of the individuals engaged in that profession and the community's interest. They offer activities such as lectures, fora, academic tours and outreach projects among others.

With the mission of forming leaders with competence, conscience and commitment, OSA collaborates with students in exploring avenues for personal growth, social responsibility and skills development. It has a Student Leadership Development Program (SLDP) that applies the University's 3C's model (competence, conscience and commitment). Under this umbrella program are the following:

a.) Change Leadership (CL) is meant for current organization presidents and other interested students who are holding key positions in the organizations. It is concerned with the driving forces, visions and processes that fuel large-scale transformation. It introduces the concept of transformational leadership as a potent tool for effecting faster, smarter and more efficient changes in student organizations and for creating positive and valuable change in the larger community. It aims to form masses of leaders who aspire to make something happen in the community they serve. It empowers students to carry the ultimate goal of creating a better world and just society for self and for others.

b.) Ateneo School for Upcoming Leaders (ASUL) is a student leadership formation program that seeks to gather, nurture and empower a community of "potential" leaders who show influence among their peers. This program shares an integral part in forming the students' conscience by inspiring them to take active leadership role in the University.

ASUL explores leadership issues through transformative learning that exposes first year and second year students to a broad spectrum of people and organizations within and outside the University. Participants build their knowledge and network by meeting students from the different schools and colleges and listening to the experiences and insights shared by formators and faculty members in the University. They are also exposed to different organizations and foundations outside the University. Participants learn through indoor and outdoor discussions and activities, exposures, immersions, participant observations, individual and small group reflection sessions and peer presentations and outreach programs.

c.) Atenista Ako Movement is dedicated to promoting Ignatian values and inciting University spirit. Its focus is on the resolution of evident and pressing campus problems by encouraging positive attitude among students. The program encourages students to not just live by the essence of being Ateneans but commit to the values lived by St Ignatius in their day-to-day lives.

There are three things that serve as basis for operation of the movement: 1.) Sense of Identity; 2.) Sense of Ownership; and 3.) Inciting University Spirit. These things, when successfully acted upon are aimed at attaining change in campus culture.

d.) STREAMS-Pathways to Higher Education is an opportunity given to students who wish to fulfil a sense of social responsibility. In STREAMS, the volunteers are exposed to social issues, particularly on education and are given the chance to provide opportunities for graduating public high school students obtain and complete higher education.

STREAMS explores educational concerns through transformative learning that exposes high school participants to a broad spectrum of opportunities that nurture their full potential to attain quality higher education. Participants gain more knowledge through the facilities and resources that the University provides; acquire new skills through personality development and leadership formation sessions; and increase their network by meeting students from different schools and student leaders and key administrators of Xavier University. On the other hand, student volunteers running the program gain more opportunities for community development work and skills training through the formation program provided for them and the actual delivery of their respective roles and responsibilities.

B. Campus Ministries Office

Campus Ministries Office (CMO) envisions an XU community that bears witness to Christian values and teachings. It promotes and nourishes a deep faith that blossoms forth into works of justice, peace, integrity of creation, and dialogue with other living faiths and culture.

Centered on Christ and guided by Ignatian Spirituality, in collaboration with other formation units, and in dialogue with other living faiths and cultural communities, CMO commits to nurture the life of faith and facilitate the apostolic formation of each member of the XU community.

Recent developments in attaining holistic formation of students involve designing the program in such a way that:

1. It envisions the promotion of the development goal that pertains to the holistic formation as an integral part of the university's mission;
2. It is fundamental to the development of the Xavier Ateneo graduate; and
3. It is applicable to all students under the baccalaureate, graduate, and professional programs.

Undergraduate students (as well as students of the law school and medical school) in every level should go through the spiritual formation experience through recollections and retreats. Graduate Program students, on the other hand, should have at least two spiritual formation sessions.

1. Recollection and Retreat Programs

Pursuant to the university mandate articulated in Higher Education Council Resolution 07: 11-14-18-19 and approved by then University President, Fr. Roberto C. Yap, SJ on December 12, 2018, undergraduate students are required to complete their recollection and retreat programs as an essential component of their graduation requirements. By definition, recollection typically involves a one-day activity, while a retreat extends over multiple days. All students are required to participate in recollections and retreats regardless of their religious affiliation or denomination. Xavier Ateneo ensures, however, that the spiritual formation programs are inclusive by providing an option to have separate groups for Muslims. During their first year, Muslim students will join the NSTP Processing Session alongside their peers from different faiths. As they progress into their second to fourth years, the retreat modules are meticulously tailored to cater to their unique needs and beliefs. This approach ensures that the spiritual formation experience remains both meaningful and relevant to each student's faith journey.

It is during these off-campus recollections and retreats that students engage in periods of silence in order to reflect upon their relationship with themselves, others, and God. It is hoped that students emerge from these days of prayer and reflection with a clearer sense of identity and purpose, and a deeper relationship with God.

Required Number of Days

For four-year baccalaureate degree programs, students are required to participate in a half-day recollection integrated into their NSTP course during their first year, attend two sets of recollections during their second and third year, and a retreat integrated into their OJT/internship or practicum course during their graduating year.

School of Law students are required to participate in a one-day recollection every year from their first year to their third year and attend an overnight retreat during their senior year.

Students in the School of Medicine will participate in a one-day recollection during their first and second year, a one-night/two-day retreat during their junior year, and a two-night/three-day retreat during their senior year.

Graduate School students are required to attend at least two recollections, labeled as Module 1 and Module 2, throughout their program. The Module 1 recollection is specifically designed for entry level students, while Module 2 is tailored towards graduating students.

Certificate of Attendance

Upon completion of each recollection or retreat, students receive a Certificate of Attendance.

The Campus Ministries Office reviews the certificates of undergraduate students for clearance purposes. Meanwhile, graduate and law school students are required to present two recollection certificates as attachments to their application for graduation.

2. The Religious Organizations

In addition to the recollection and retreat programs, undergraduate students are encouraged to join organizations affiliated with the Xavier University-United Religious Organizations (XU-URO). These religious organizations work in partnership with the Campus Ministries Office to promote and nourish the mission of evangelization on campus. The Campus Ministers and some faculty and/or staff act as moderators for these organizations.

3. Faith and Socio-Cultural Dialogue

As a formation component of a Jesuit University in Mindanao, the Campus Ministries Office is committed to fostering dialogue that explores the interplay between faith and contemporary issues within the socio-cultural landscape. Through such dialogue, Xavier Ateneo students, faculty, staff, and the whole community can come to a deeper appreciation and understanding of their own religious traditions and the traditions of others.

Fostering an atmosphere of dialogue and openness, it is hoped that:

a. XU students, regardless of denominational affiliations and faith traditions, feel a sense of belongingness to an inter-faith University community where they can freely come together to pray and be able to express their religious aspirations.
b. Particular group/s of students, together with dialogue partners, work for peace and unity and actively engage in promoting a culture of peace rooted in the social teachings of the Church and the Jesuit documents on inter-religious dialogue.
c. Students and faculty members join peace-related activities regularly conducted in the Peace Park as an area of reference for promoting and sustaining a culture of peace and harmony within the campus.
d. Students, faculty and staff participate in a series of symposia or discussion-workshops and/or immersion activities concerning issues and their implications to one's faith life and cultural understanding in contemporary times.

C. University Chaplaincy

The University Chaplaincy provides the venue for students, employees, alumni, parents and other church goers for the animation of the Catholic Christian Faith expressed through the celebration of Sacraments, Sacramentals and Devotions. It cooperates with academic units so that the academic development of the students is accompanied by their sacramental life and liturgical participation. It provides students with a quiet, prayerful haven in the middle of the busy campus. And it introduces and develops Ignatian Spirituality in the students and personnel through its various programs and activities. Those who are interested are welcome to serve as choir, lectors, commentators, servers, ushers, lay ministers, sacristans, decorators, and ad hoc committee members for various liturgies and activities.

The University Chaplaincy supports in the liturgical and spiritual formation of the members of XU Church animators (the Campus Chapel Aides, the ACIL, and the LOM) who in turn serve the University Church in various functions. The Chaplaincy also takes care of the spiritual formation of the Extraordinary Ministers of the Eucharist in coordination with the Archdiocese of Cagayan de Oro.

The University Chaplaincy also provides the venue for shared reflections on faith and reason especially when there are pressing issues relevant in the spiritual and conscience formation of the members of the community.

The University Chaplaincy provides pastoral care to both members of the University Community and those from outside who regularly come to the church for spiritual nourishment.

Xavier Ateneo, a Jesuit University that shares in the mission of the Society of Jesus, puts premium in extension – one among the threefold functions of a university – through the Social Development (SD) Cluster. It translates the University's strategic goal specific to enhancing social engagement by continuously engaging partner communities and institutions to enable the members of the Xavier Ateneo community utilized acquire knowledge and address development concerns and issues, and in the process, contribute to forming men and women of character.

The SD Cluster embraces and strengthens its thrust of developing solutions for and with society, taking guidance from the University's mission-vision-goals, the Jesuit Province Roadmap, and the Sustainable Development Goals of the United Nations (UN SDGs). Through the leadership of a Vice President for Social Development (VPSD), the SD Cluster established a framework for social engagement, i.e. a) The schools and colleges take center stage in social development initiatives, b) Renewed emphasis on student social formation, and c) Institutional and programmatic engagements.

Translating these goals into action, the SD Cluster proceeds in three strands through the 1) Service Learning Program (SLP), 2) Social Involvement and Advocacy Program (SIAP), and 3) Institutional Professional Societal Engagement (IPSE). Each modality also functions as program, and is headed by a Director for SLP and SIAP, and a Coordinator for IPSE.

1. Service Learning Program (SLP) facilitates discipline-based social development engagement of students who are in their junior and senior years to various under-served communities within and outside the city. SLP also facilitates research requirements of the various academic programs through research-based social development projects.
